Transnational Judicial Dialogue of Domestic Courts on International Organisations

Increasingly, international organisations have been involved in litigation before domestic courts. In this context, a host of legal issues has become relevant, including the domestic legal personality and the privileges and immunities of international organisations. Due to the variety of relevant legal sources and legal cultures, domestic courts have dealt with these issues in different ways. At the same time, some of them have engaged in transnational judicial 'dialogues' with other domestic courts and with international courts on these issues. On 23 April 2012, leading legal scholars from various regions of the world will meet at the University of Vienna to discuss these and related issues.
